HIGH COMPLIMENT!

Members of the legislature do not entertain a very exalted opinion of the intellectual rating of their colleagues, a fact manifestly manifest on occasion. Sharp words of wit are often exchanged, the import and purport of which is that solons are no great shucks in the way of mentality.

During the debate on the bay bridge bill Assemblyman Geoffrey Morgan got rid of this one: "The bridge was designed by men almost the equal in intelligence of the members of this assembly. And that's a very high compliment to the bridge men, indeed."

To me that had all the earmarks of a dirty crack.

NOW WE KNOW

Our own assemblyman, T. H. DeLap, better known to his intimates as "Tony" pulled a fast one before the judiciary committee.

Being of serious mien and disposition, it is rather a surprise when he indulges in any form of levity.

A bill was before the committee permitting a more general use of trucks to distribute wholesale produce, and its author, Assemblyman C. C. Cottrell of Santa Clara county, in advocating a

Standard Oil Union Studies Pension Plans

Standard Oil Employees' Association last night sent telegrams to congressional representatives in Washington D. C., asking that a rider be attached to the Social Security Bill now in the hands of a Senate committee, providing that present pension plans be continued.

During a discussion of the bill, it was pointed out that the Standard Oil now provides one of the best pension plans for any industry. Fear was expressed that perhaps a mandatory pension plan may be adopted in the Social Security act which would not be as comprehensive as the present plan used by the Standard Oil company.

A short discussion of the Wagner labor bill was also held. Ben F. Mowday presided.

The Association will give an entertainment and dance June 28 at the Standard Oil Rod and Gun Club.

Attendance At School Doubles

Increasing interest in the Rappy Kitchen, the free cooking school being conducted by Mrs. Healy Heath for the Record-Herald was made abundantly manifest yesterday when over double the attendance of the first day was present at the Richmond Clubhouse.

In her work, if such it can be called she has the cooperation of a number of Richmond merchants who daily furnish the utensils and the materials with which her viands are made.

There is no question of their part in the food served to community only. The actual demonstration of the proper methods of cooking part, part cake, part, the preparation of salads and salad dressing, new breakfast in five minutes, and other suggestions to make cooking more fun for the busy mother of the household.

By a vote of 51 to 14 the lower house refused approval of a proposed constitutional amendment which would have permitted the State to levy a gross receipts tax in lieu of all other taxes, and allocated back to cities and counties necessary revenues for support of local governmental activities.

The Senate approved Assembly amendments to the measure, continuing for two years the five percent limit on government expenditures, and sent the bill to the governor.

Breakfast Is One Meal That Should Not Be Eaten Too Hastily

By CLAUD NORTH CHRISMAN, M.D.

BREAKFAST is a meal that seems to get more discussion than any other. There are several classes of people interested in discussing it, and many reasons for this interest. This is perhaps because it comes at an early point in the day when all the day's affairs are pressing.

No amount of pressure or hurry should be allowed to push out of the way the fact that breakfast is an important meal. That it is important because it is the first meal of the day is beside the point. It is only one item in the nutritional program, but it must be included in the entire sum.

DR. CHRISMAN

The fact is that the name of the meal is often a non-descriptive one. It is being really the breaking of the fast of the night, there hasn't been any fast to break. Most of us, according to present custom, have our heaviest meal at night, often as late as eight o'clock. Countless households and evening social affairs extend the occasion for eating to still later hours.

A regrettable fact just now quite popular among the urban folks is to leave one social affair and go on to a second one the same night. I hear of some who end up at a very early breakfast before returning home. All of this can have little or no consideration for the digestive tract and in the end abuses the entire system of tissue building and repair.

Fast Really Needed

In such cases there should really be a fast for a number of hours to let the stomach empty itself and recuperate its forces.

But to consider what we call the common run of folks. There is the person who is more fond of his bed than of his bread and has time only for a hasty snack as he or she hurries off to some task. The worst offender in this class is the young school girl and the young office girl.

The lack of nutrition is later met by nibbling. A bag or box of crackers, chocolates, or even milk tablets, is kept in a desk drawer and at various intervals a few bites are eaten. This affords very little nourishment and serves mostly to set up the digestive machinery too frequently and to little purpose.

It is to rearrange the hours of the day so that one need not be too sleepy and unrefreshed to get up in time for a reasonable breakfast. Just here is a good place to quote Alice Garrett Marsh, dietitian of a well-known sanatorium. "Nature intended that breakfast should be composed of foods that not only give immediately available energy, but furnish sufficient energy to last through the most arduous part of the day's work."

That doesn't sound like the hastily snatched bite with which so many eat and run. The trouble is that the pressure and haste of this kind of a morning meal leaves its effect on the entire morning. This is the period when most important decisions must be met and the bulk of the day's work done.

There are hosts of people who do not yet know that the brain's efficiency depends largely on the general health of the body. There are folks who do not feel like eating when they first get up. This class should be out of bed soon enough to put on a setting-up program of some sort.

They may not only a glass of hot water with some fruit juice or salt added. The cup of hot coffee who some crave need not be harmful if the reaction is normal.

Breakfast should be a balanced meal as well as any other. If it is met with distaste, swallowed in haste, or otherwise mistreated, it has been badly managed. The day's program for food and energy must be re-arranged if we would have its gross output measure up to our expectations.

Modes and Manners

QUESTION: "Please give me a list of foods which may be eaten with the fingers?" —Dora T.

ANSWER: Cookies, bon-bons and dry cakes are finger foods. Also radishes, olives, artichokes, celery and corn on the cob. Lobster claws and shrimps served whole in their shells may be pulled apart with the fingers. The latter are peeled and taken to the mouth with the fingers.

QUESTION: "Is it wrong to accept gifts from a young man who has been calling on me for the past two months?" —Paula E.

ANSWER: Such gifts as candy, books and flowers are acceptable. But do not accept expensive gifts.

Leisurely Dip Helps Skin, Relaxes Body

By JACQUELINE HUNT

EVERY woman should know how thoroughly enjoyable and stimulating a bath can be. You tend to make bathing an automatic process like brushing your teeth or giving your skin its nightly creaming. You step under your shower in the morning because you have got into the habit of doing so or hop into your tub at night and out again without realizing what you are doing.

If you are one of those speedy bathers you are missing a lot of fun and a lot of the value of your bath. Begin tonight before you go to bed or dress for your party, and have a leisurely bath.

Let the water run quite warm into your tub and sprinkle a handful of bath crystals or a few drops of bath oil into the water. These preparations help soften the water, as well as give it a delightful fragrance.

Step into the tub and lie back. Feel your muscles and nerves relax. Your bath will be beneficial if you cleanse your face and hands thoroughly first and apply a film of softening cream to the face and neck.

The moist warmth from the tub relaxes the skin and helps it absorb the softening cream. During the ten or fifteen minutes when you are relaxing in the tub, lay small cotton compresses moistened with eye lotion over your eyes to relax and refresh them.

For the business end of your bath, have a good bath brush. Do not be afraid to use lots of soap and to scrub. Go over your entire body, giving special attention to your elbows, shoulder blades, legs and feet. The back, too, needs the friction of a good bath brush to take away all of the dried crust and to prevent enlarged pores.

Rinse away all soap with a hand spray or under the shower before you step from the tub. Failure to do so may cause your skin to flake and chafe. Use a big, fleecy, absorbent towel for drying and again rub your body briskly to bring up the circulation and keep the skin rosy and soft. Don't leave little damp spots between your shoulder blades or elsewhere, but dry thoroughly.

Incidentally, this is a good time to go through your daily exercises. Use your bath towel as resistance when you bend and twist and stretch. As a final delightful touch anoint your skin with bath oil or have a brisk rub with eau de Cologne. The bath oil is preferable if you are an outdoor girl who bakes her back to the sun while playing tennis or basks practically uncovered in the sun. After the oil or eau de Cologne has disappeared, dust lightly with bath powder.

A time-table of beauty events for brides who want to be glamorous is contained in the leaflet, "Beauty For Spring Brides." Just send a stamped self-addressed envelope if you would like a copy.

Any good garden soil, which is soil well-tilled, well-drained and rich in humus, will grow good roses. (The rose is a hearty feeder.) The lay of the land should be such as to drain off excess water during heavy rains, yet retain enough in case of droughts. It is better to have the soil lean toward heaviness rather than toward lightness, although a medium-heavy soil, loose in texture, is ideal. A heavy soil may be lightened by adding sand, and a light soil made heavier by adding clay.

Breakfast should be a balanced meal as well as any other. If it is met with distaste, swallowed in haste, or otherwise mistreated, it has been badly managed. The day's program for food and energy must be re-arranged if we would have its gross output measure up to our expectations.

RANSOM BILL SEARCH AT RENO MADE

crete piece of evidence. It was the $20 ransom bill paid by a nervous man of about 30 for a train ticket from Huntington, Ore., to Salt Lake City.

DESCRIBE S. SPECT

F. W. Pothier of Boise and William H. Disherman of Nampa, both brakemen on train 14 on which the suspect was a passenger. Sunday night, said they noticed the man who got on at Huntington because he was the only passenger.

The man asked Pothier for the time, and said nothing more. He sat in the smoker for about 10 minutes while the porter was making up his berth, then retired.

At Nodus, Ida., the train went on a siding as the steamship flier City of Portland passed. A few passengers went on the observation platform or got off the train but the brakemen did not see the suspect among them.

WAS NOT NERVOUS

Pothier and Disherman got off at Nampa and were unable to observe whether or not the man went as far as Salt Lake City.

Pothier said the man did not appear nervous. He wore a medium dark suit, probably brown, and a dark hat low over his eyes. He was about 30.

FOUR SUSPECTS

Federal agents said they had the names of four suspects, all Tacoma or Seattle men.

Portland police issued "hold and question" orders for four men, believed not the same suspects listed by the Federal men.

The men wanted by Portland police for questioning in the case are Herbert Lester Johnstone, former Olympia blackmailer and Los Angeles police character; Jack Bailey, former bootlegger in Portland, Tacoma and Seattle; and Richard Franzen and Elliott Michener, ex-convicts from Oregon State prison.

SERVED SENTENCE

Johnstone served five years in Menard, Wash., reformatory for attempting to extort $10,000 from ex-Mayor Mottman of Olympia. He was charged at one time with holding the notorious "Madame" who victimized Portland merchants with extortion threats in 1919, but he was cleared. In 1927 he was arrested in Los Angeles and charged with conspiracy and violating the smuggling laws.

Bailey's operation as a bootlegger and rum runner became unprofitable, according to a police tip, and he turned to kidnapping.

Funk distributed samples of the products of his concern and told the Kiwanis members highlights on the manufacture of wine from the time the grapes are pressed until the wines are sold.

Favorable recommendation, said: "Now in our county we make a lot of honey."

SPEAKER WAXES SWEETLY
Speaker Craig, it is to be inferred, occasionally gets a trifle bored with some of the men over whom he wields the gavel; otherwise he would not have permitted himself the luxury of this flip of caustic wit. The house was in some of its frequent uproars when Craig, without cracking a smile, remarked:

"There will be no session of the House next Wednesday afternoon. The circus will be in town and the Assembly does not wish to compete with it."

The remark calls to mind the violent protest I saw registered in print not long since over comparing Congress with a circus. A column wrote to a newspaper and intimated in language that could not be misinterpreted that he bitterly resented any such unfair comparison—that the circus was an old and venerated institution and was conducted along intelligent and orderly lines and was not a disorganized and meaningless show.

I wonder what he meant? Also what Speaker Craig meant?

ENTENTE CORDIALE

During a verbal joust over the Alameda resolution two of the assemblymen indulged in the following:

"You are a scholarly attorney and a gentleman," remarked William Mosely Jones to Ray Williamson of San Francisco.

Williamson looked at some coins in his hands and replied: "Mr. Jones, I am a little short of cash this morning."

Jones continued: "How many cases have you

ARMY CHIEFS KEEP EYE ON RISING RIVER

City, Kan.

PUMPS INSTALLED

Pumps were being installed in dozens of the great factories and packing houses of the district and machines and equipment were being moved to upper floors. A wholesale evacuation occurred in the Armourdale and Argentine residential sections of the low lands.

Colonel R. C. Moore, district army engineer, predicted there would be no meeting of floods on the two rivers.

LOSES FORCE

"The Kaw lost 20,000 second feet of flow between Wamego and Topeka last night," Moore explained. "The valley between Topeka and Kansas City will be flooded, but it will relieve the pressure here."

The crest of the flood came abreast of Topeka at noon, some 12 hours later than expected. It reached a depth of slightly less than 28 feet and the 30 foot dikes protecting North Topeka, a community of 5000 population, held the water back.

HOMES DESERTED

Practically every home in North Topeka was evacuated and the Kansas National Guard housed hundreds of refugees in its armory and on the Kansas fair grounds. Lowland farms upriver and down from the city were inundated. Marooned persons were taken from these farms in motor launches.

Residents of North Lawrence fled to high ground. The stream was running within six feet of the top of the dikes this afternoon and the crest was not expected until tonight. Three hundred CCC workers piled sand against the dikes.

PROTECT AIRPORT

Backwaters from the Kaw covered two small lakes of the Lakeview fishing club. The Lawrence Paper Mill company evacuated the basement of its building.

Workers at Kansas City stopped erosion of the municipal airport by building rip-raps and sandbags into the river. The flood threat caused Transcontinental & Western Air, Inc., to move its transport planes to St. Louis and Wichita. Other companies planned to follow.

taken to the United States Supreme Court, Mr. Williamson, "I might say I packed the brief cases for the other attorney. He got a $200,000 fee. I'd be ashamed to tell you what I got."

A "DIRTY" DIG

During a debate on the controversial pawn broker bill not long since, sarcasm, irony and insult filled the air. One exasperated legislator finally arose when the acrimonious debate had dragged out its wearisome length for a couple of hours and said:

"Mr. Speaker, All this talk is getting us no place fast. It reminds me of a dog industriously digging at a gopher hole—he is busy as hell, throws up a lot of dirt but gets no nearer the gopher. I move the previous question."

MODERN
demonstrated at the
COOKING SCHOOL.
TODAY & FRIDAY

THE old, old adage that no one can do two things at the same time and do either of them well is being disproved at the Electric Cooking School.

Here a clever young lady is explaining new recipes and even preparing creamy dessert or salad dressing with an electric mixer. Behind her in the model kitchen on a platform a whole dinner is cooking. Vegetables and meats are all placed in an oven at the same time and all will be perfectly cooked when she takes them out an hour or so later.

There is no mystery whatever about this. It is a practical demonstration of what the electric range is doing for thousands of women every day at meal times. It is so simplified a method of cooking that no personal watching or worry is demanded of the cook.

Have you ever thought what such a method would mean to you in your everyday cooking experience?

It means you may now cook without thinking about what is in your stove cooking until you are ready to call the family to the table. It means, too, that you now have a way of cooking without fire-building, without any of the soot or smoke or stifling heat that make ordinary cooking so wearisome.

A special display of the very latest electric range models has been arranged for the Cooking School. Come and see for yourself the finer quality and new beauty of these 1935 models. Prices this year, too, are lower than ever.
